Assiout and Thebes, Prof. Maspere, refugnfind plundered necropolis of immense extent.

As far as has been yet ascertained, the necro-polis dates from the Ptolemio period; but as the work of exploration proceeds it will probably be found that it contains more ancient quarters. The riches of this new burial field would meanwhile seem to be almost inexhaustible. Five great tombs or cutacombs already opened have yielded 120 nummies, and within the short space of three hours Professor Maspero verified the sites of over 100 more similar catacombs, all absolutely intact. The necropolis of Ekh-fewer than five or six thousand embalmed dead. Of these perhaps not more than 20 per cent will turn out to be of archaelegical or historical value; but the burvest of pa-not fail in any case to be of unprecedented extent. Ekheneem is the ancient Khemmis

A STORY OF ANTHONY TROLLOPE. They were both with Mr. John Burns (the well-Luown chairman of the Cuhard Line) at a little Highland inn, when, after supper, loud and long, lasting for into the night. In the morning an old gentleman, who slept in a bedroom above where they were, complained to the landlord of the manner in which his night's rest had been disburded, and presumed to express his astonishment that such men should have taken more than was good for them. "Well," replied the landlord." I am bound to confess there was much loud talking and laughter; but they had nothing stronger than ten and fresh berrings." "Bless me," rejoined the old gentleman, " if that is so, what would they be after dinner!"-Good Words.

THE THROAT AN ORGAN PIPE, An English doctor lately proposed to give Scotch tenors meladious Italian voices b causing them to breathe medicated air; and now a German doctor professes to have discovered a plan by which he can convert any person, male or female into a living organ with all sorts of stops. This is to be achieved it would seem, by what he describes as " slightsurgical operation," but what appears to be in reality a mechanical rather than a sur gical one. The human throat, according to the learned Teuton, bears a perfect analogy to an organ pipe, and the differences in pitch and quality between any two human voices are due to the differences in the size and construction of the throats by which they are The tea garden at Port Blair, in the Anrespectively produced.
